So what can I say told me a little about your going ons with your Husband. My heart breaks for you. Ok that made me sound like I have a rainbow shirt on. But ya I feel you should hold your hand up to your Husband and say "this is my Pimp hand dont make me use it." Im glad can be there to talk to you about problems I will give you some pointers as for what to do granted we have never hung out but im better than most im SMART. Here is a list of what i would say if i were in your shoes.

1- on Tithing. Say to him I wish to Tithe for the fact its what I believe in and if you loved me you would understand, that, thats what makes me happy. If he says he does not believe in it tell him your not going to look down on him for his beliefs, so he should not look down on you for yours.

So are you both going to the Christmas party? you guys should it would be fun.

Also we should all get together one of these years

i agree on everything!!! yes he's coming to the christmas party, yes we should hang out and yes i am paying tithing (he hasn't discovered yet) and his very convincing argument is "if we are saving money from no second car/ cell phone/ groceries etc that i don't have the right to take all those savings and 'throw it away' on tithing" and yes, he's been basically ruling me with fear, intimidation, control and always manages to convince me in the moment to the point that i second guess EVERYTHING that i thought i knew about myself/beliefs/traditions etc. it's like i'm finally realizing i'm being brainwashed and just starting to pull the little cords off (you know, like frankenstein-how funny that i'm comparing myself to a scary huge green guy) hahaha so can I call you frank? that sucks. Ok ya you can save but if its important to you then he should understand. I bet you are waiting for him to pull his face off and reveal that he is really an Alien from Planet Golop.

that would be helpful. but seriously, i can already anticipate his arguments/logic (or lack of) etc... and i DON'T want to be frank anymore!!
