During the summer Susan would work

One day an officer stopped
Susan said the officer didn't even know the laws when Susan questioned her. I had recently gone over the laws & gave them a pamphlet. They lost it. Susan had tell me to bring it over so she could copy it & be prepared incase they were ever harrasted by unknowlegable police again. She made a copy for herself & which she put in a covered sleeve to keep in the scooter.

baby sat the boys this past summer while Susan was working & Josh was busy working on the deck out back. They said Josh & Susan would argue on their cell phones.

When Josh comes over he's very friendly & talks for a long time. One time Susan came & let ~~them~~ ^{more} boys play for a few minutes ~~there~~ then told them & Josh they needed to go home & bath & get ready for bed. She asked Josh to go home & help. He said he would but never made it before she was finished. She made plans for childcare & transportation. ~~He~~ came & told Josh the plan but he ~~over~~refused & told her he was keeping the van & taking her & dropping her off. She looked disappointed & they both went home. According to her schedule she would have been home when he needed the van so I didn't understand why he wanted to get up early to take her so he could have the van. Because he had to get the boys up too. It seemed pointless. The last time I seen them come over together Susan was much more talkative & actually was the one bossing Josh around to go check on the boys because they had gone into our backyard. I was surprised because she was usually more quiet when he was around.

On Monday the 7th I arrived @ [redacted] I seen cops, daycare & Josh's mother. My mom said they were concerned about carbon monoxide poisoning. I went to find out if they were OK. I found out the family was gone & the van too. The babysitter/childcare provider said Susan's last blog on myspace Saturday night said Josh had won a camcorder @ his company holiday party that night. They needed Josh's work #. I went home to get his business card but my mom had thrown it out because he no longer worked for that reality company. When I arrived back @ the childcare van where the ladies were talking I heard the childcare provider say suicide & believe it was Josh's [redacted] who said I'm sure I know more about that. ^{#1}Before I went for the #. The babysitter was apologizing because she said she had a key to the house & didn't realize police were going to break the window to get in. She said no one knew she had a key not even Josh. It was her & Susan's secret because Josh had locked her ^{Susan} out.

After that Josh's [redacted] exchanged phone numbers. So if we seen anything we could call Josh's [redacted]

The childcare provider was offering to call someone to repair the broken window but [redacted] refused. I left to [redacted]

Later that night (Monday the 1st) Josh arrived home about 1 hr after the last officer had left the house. I called to let [redacted]

[redacted] know Josh was home & the officers had left about an hour ago. She said that was interesting. I offered to go have Josh phone her but she refused. When I insisted on going she said Josh called just a few ago. I kept asking if everything was OK & if Susan & the kids were OK. But she just kept saying I don't know, were just waiting to hear. She thanked me said it was helpful & hung up.

Tuesday the 8th I was sleeping when I heard - [redacted] say Josh is out shoveling the driveway. (Because it snowed Monday night/Tuesday early morning) [redacted]

[redacted] Later she said it was weird that Josh parked the van out in the driveway & let it get snowed on all morning. Its unusual because they had been parking in the garage recently w/ the changing weather. Later Tuesday night forensic's arrived.

Thursday the 10th @ The Candle light vigil Josh walked up behind me, [redacted] I didn't recognize him at first I recognized the boy. Then a few people tried talking to him but he was unusually speechless. He did finally smile & we hugged & thanked the neighbor - [redacted] off his house. He just kinda nodded when a few others asked if he was OK & hangin in there. I offered to take him & the boy some stew. He said he did eat a 1/2 of a sandwich for dinner. When I commented about being stressed & not eating much. I told him if he needed anything to let us know. When I mentioned not getting much sleep, he said he had only got 12 hrs sleep in the last 5 days, then said or however many days its been. When I seen the childcare provider @ the vigil she said shh I don't want media ^{anyone} buggin. She also express Josh being angry @ her for reporting them missing Monday morning. The neighbor [redacted] didn't understand why Josh could possibly be mad. I explained why he shouldn't be. She left into the crowd when Josh arrived. She did end up near us again when Josh was closer & asked him how he was doing. Josh told her something about a couple weeks & taking the boys out of childcare because he can't afford it. She expressed concerns about education & stability. He just listened.

There were several (ladies) of us who were concerned because the boys had no gloves & they were also holding candles w/o guards/cups to catch the hot melting wax. Someone gave them gloves & I got them safe candles. (And my candle in a bowl to warm hands. It was freezing!

Josh walked off during the vigil to listen leaving [redacted] near us.
He was talking to a lady I seen on the news @ the vigil.
She talked most w/ Josh. They seemed very close but when someone asked if she was family, she replied w/ no a friend.
[redacted] was telling her about walking in the mud & squishing in his toes. He refused to answer any questions but when people quit asking things he would talk randomly. He ask if she knew it rained [redacted] everyday? He also talked about the white soft stuff getting in the top of his boots.
Josh ended up picking him up & taking him away while we were talking still. When I asked if he was going home after the vigil He said he was planning on it. So I said I'd watch & bring him stew. But I never
